Hampshire Horsewatch

Hampshire Horsewatch was relaunched in 2000. The scheme is run by volunteers both from the equestrian community and Hampshire Constabulary police officers who have an interest in horses, known as Equine Liaison Officers.

The aims are to educate the equestrian community in crime prevention with regards to their property, horse, tack, stables, trailers and horseboxes more efficiently and effectively. To achieve this people are encouraged to join Horsewatch, which is free. Police Officers and Hampshire Horsewatch Co-ordinators attend local equestrian events to talk to Horse owners.

Horse owners are encouraged to mark, with a unique identifying mark, rugs and items of tack (Post Code or the Horse's Freeze mark). Tack marking boxes are located throughout the county for this purpose. We have also been working with a number of people who offer crime prevention services. One of which is RUG-ID who mark rugs another is Farmkey who offer a number of services including trailer marking and the freeze branding of horses. Both offer a discount to Horsewatch members on production of a membership card.

Communication to members is done through email and a web page on the New Forest Equine Directory Website. A bulletin is compiled weekly and sent out to Horsewatch members who are on email. These members are then encouraged to print a copy off to pass around their yards and to distribute it further. The bulletin contains information about incidents that are going on in Hampshire and any that we hear about from other Horse Watches throughout the country.

The owner of the New Forest Equine Directory has kindly set up a number of pages set aside for Horsewatch. These pages include a General News Forum page where people can register any information or advice. There is also a general advice section on Crime Prevention Guidance for horse owners.

Horsewatch is trying to encourage horse owners to be more proactive, to be aware of who is coming onto the yards where they keep their horses. To keep records of any strange occurrences and report these back to the regional Co-ordinators and their local Equine Liaison Officer.

To investigate a crime a police officer or ELO needs details – any strange incidents, equipment being moved, callers to the yard wanting to sell or buy items. To trace stolen saddles the saddle has to be marked with an unique number or code (postal code) the number can then be distributed along with details of the stolen items to other forces throughout the country. 3 years ago a large number of saddles were recovered only a few had been post coded. 1 which had been coded was returned to its owner 2 years after it had been stolen.

Various forces around the country have been recovering stolen equestrian items, some are marked/post coded etc, but mostly not. This is frustrating for police officers, as well as trying to return the property to the rightful owner there is a better chance of a conviction if the property is marked and can be proven to have come from the proceeds of crime.

We need the horse owning public to be more proactive to help the police help them.
